New Identification and Access Card Policy

Santa Ana, CA – To maintain and improve security of court facilities, a new policy on displaying identification will become effective November 17, 2008. The new policy requires court employees, attorneys, and individuals who have access to secured areas, such as judicial chambers and back hallways of the Court, to prominently display on their person access identification cards or other approved forms of identification.

Attorneys are asked to wear their state issued bar cards as a form of identification. Clear badge holders are available for use from courtroom bailiffs. Court employees have been issued photo identification cards.
